will tend to make it worse. If 133 of these unfortunate are natives of New South Wales, it suggests that they are young girls for whom conduct some one should give account, and whose disgrace should be shared by persons about whose identity sufficient inquiry may not have been made. This is a part of benevolent work which will have to be done with rigorous justice to the victims, whilst a tender mercy is exercised towards their innocent victims. There is some as well as misfortune in this form of social evil, and if the country is to feel the aid of asylums for outraged women, some effort should be made to punish those who wrought the deed of shame. Provision must be made to meet these painful cases, but at present it does not appear that the best plan is to build a "modern hospital" for that purpose.

It does not go simply by saying it, that this local charity has saved the country generally from the infliction of a poor law. The difference between this country and England is sufficient to account for the fact that we have no such law. The Benevolent Asylum has done good work, and there is no need to depreciate it, but it has not done this. In the course of years one department has been added to another in much the same way, as one addition to the building has followed another. Its administration is now burdened, as the place is overcrowded. With its removal from its present position a disintegration of its conglomerate functions will have to take place. The experience of other charities suggests that this experience will be better for a faithful examination, and that in future its operations should be such that the crime, vice, and misery dealt with shall not grow but that upon which they feed. Directors of this institution are well aware of many instances of attempted imposition, and can hardly be supposed that they detect every effort at fraud; but under separate and vigilant management it might turn out that the work would be done proportionally less; at any rate, with or without this asylum, the country will yet dispense with a poor law.

The chairman's statement relating to the funds of the institution requires expansion. Dr. Rixworth said:—"It ought to be understood by the public and those interested in the society that sums (invested) had been bequeathed so that the society itself could only use the interest of the money on the investment." This statement was repeated by one of the speakers, who said:—"There was an idea that the institution was rich in funds; but he would like it to be understood that their funds were such that they could not be devoted to the ordinary purposes of the institution." The report states that the "directors have brought the subject (of out-door relief) under the consideration of the COLONIAL SECRETARY in order that an additional vote may be obtained to recoup the loss occasioned" on that department. The facts of the case as set out in the general balance sheet show that only £150 is put down for interest on the investments; and that this amount is derived from Government debentures value £3000. But the investment account shows that that fund is debited with £1579, interest on the year from other investments. The total amount invested is set down at £36,195. The public may be forgiven for the idea that the institution is rich in funds. The amount named as legacies is £2179. There are other sums which may be placed under that head, making upwards of £6000. Apparently, the £17,254 called "investment and interest on bank deposits" is not locked up by any restrictions. It is being annually augmented by the interest upon all the investments excepting that on the Government debentures, and it is a gradually increasing amount. With this fact before them, Parliament may want to know why so large a sum of money is locked up, checking popular benevolence, and why its interest is not expended year by year to save the public treasury.

About the best scrap of Indian news we have yet received is the following. The Viceroy has visited the courts and inspected the work of the New South Wales at the Calcutta Exhibition, and "since then his EXCELLENCY has interested himself in the matter, and has instructed the authorities to arrange with the Australian representatives for a fair trial of the products adapted for Indian consumption, with the view of introducing them into the army without delay. That looks like business, trade, commerce. No talk of subsidy or special duties, or remittances, but, "Let us get samples, and see if we can use them. You seem capable of supplying us with those things we require for our army, and we are anxious to get them. Let us make a fair trial, and see what we can do for each other." India has taken the matter fairly in hand there. Will Australia do likewise? India has said, "We are prepared to trade; we like the specimens your travellers have displayed here; will you deliver them in bulk, and of a like quality?" It remains for the merchants of Australia to supply a practical answer to the question. If they are prepared to do trade, what was the use of sending samples? There is no necessity for an appeal to Government in the matter, or for work of special commissioners or philanthropic committees. If a Sydney merchant sends his traveller beyond Bourke, he is ready to forward goods to the traveller's trunk, and it should be just the same with India. The Exhibition Commissioner is but a wholesale traveller, the Exhibition itself but an institution to clear the way for trade, and it is mean trade that cries to the Government for remittance or crutches. Stockowners find their own ships and pay their own freight, and they may years past they have known a road to the food market, and never dreamed that they had any claim upon the Government for specially subsidised steamers or exemption from ordinary dues. What is the difference between trade in horses and trade in beef, in fruit, in dairy produce, wine, or commercial stores? The Viceroy says, "We will give you every chance if you will supply our wants." Surely if the power of supply is left, there is energy enough amongst our men of commerce to find for themselves a way.

Mr. WILLIAM HAY believes that the wants and necessities of the colonies are not properly met before the English Parliament. That is very likely to be true, for it is a small part of the duty of that Parliament to heed colonial wants and aspirations. An independent constitution has been given to the colonies with a view to their looking after themselves. If the British Parliament had better knowledge of the wants and needs of the colonies, it might easily have that—does not follow that they could render much help. The proposal of Mr. Hay, that the colonial Prime Minister, through the Governor, might recommend a person for the honour of a seat in the House of Lords, is not the poor man's idea of originality. The suggestion has been made before, and now it is the voice of JACOB, but the hands look like those of EZEKIEL. Mr. HAY is wise enough not to suggest that the person nominated for this office should sit in the House of Commons; and yet, if he could do good anywhere, that certainly would be the place. Would it not be better to make each Australian colony a single constituency entitled to return one member to the Commons? There would be a difficulty in his keening himself abreast of colonial progress. He would be in great danger of settling down into a barely ornamental personage, and the failure of his individual service might reflect upon the distinguished scheme for colonial representation in the British Legislature. The most eccentric part of the proposal is to place a colonial "person" among the nobility and dignitaries of the second estate of the realm. Could anyone be found to dare the perilous ascent? But several would be needed, and an accession of them. Imagination fails to picture a retired merchant, a retired professional, or a retired man rising to address the House of Lords on the tariff of Port Jackson, a land bill for the settlement of our Western territory, or the latest Criminal Law Amendment Act. That he would acquit himself well there may be no doubt. Such men can do here, and would do it there. But what about their noble hearers? Would they listen to his strong words? And if they did, would they understand? And if they did, would they care? And then in what way could they help the colonies? The individuals honoured by nomination to this post might be considered ornamental to Australia. But there is a feeling that the honours of this sort do not sit well on colonialists. A plain C.M.G. is much criticised; and who can tell what might be said if we had a real lord, though only one?

NEWS OF THE DAY.

BAYER PASHA, when making a reconnaissance from the seaboard in the direction of Tokor, encountered a considerable body of hostile natives, who took flight at his approach, some hundreds of them being killed by Baker's cavalry. From Austria we learn by this morning's cablegrams that since the ordinary law was suspended many benevolent acts have been done by the Emperor. It is reported that in France in favour of the Bonapartist cause. The Paris Temps condemns the Redivivisme scheme proposed by the Government.

Respectively the effect of Thomas and Sons' failure upon the London Chartered Bank of Australia, we learn that the general manager of the bank in Melbourne has received advice from the directors that the bank has received from the bank does not exceed more than £200,000, which is more than covered by the reserve fund which is invested in Canada, and kept distinct from the bank's paid-up capital of £1,000,000.

The English mail by the Orient steamer Garonne was delivered in Sydney on Saturday morning. The papers and correspondence that should have arrived by the Ravenna, but which was held back by the postal authorities in England, not being specially marked for transmission by the latter vessel, have also arrived by the Garonne. Our London correspondent's weekly communication to December 14 was among the detained letters, and with that of December 21 (the Garonne's London date) will be found in another column. Garonne's mail comprises over 300 letters, including 200 of which are letters. In order to effect delivery as early as possible, arrangements were made by the Postal and Railway Departments to send on the English portion of the mails from Mittagong by a special engine and van, and by this means they reached the Post Office about 7 o'clock. It is satisfactory to know that this very large mail was sorted and ready for delivery to private boxholders and by letter-carriers by a quarter past 9.

ARRANGEMENTS were made for a meeting of the Cabinet on Saturday; but only the Colonial Secretary, the Minister for Works, and the Postmaster-General attended at the appointed time, and no business, we are informed, was done.

Mr. HANNA, the road superintendent who has been engaged in the inquiry relating to the alleged scarcity of water in the tanks at Blackheath and Silvan, has reported to the Minister for Works that he thinks water can be obtained at Silvan by sinking, and that a well is about to be sunk. Mr. Wright has authorised him to cut for leaders in the district for the work of constructing a small tank, and to accept the most suitable and the least costly plan, and to proceed as early as possible for the reception of water.

The temporary arrangement which was made by the Government at the end of last year, for the purpose of keeping the fire brigades in their present state of efficiency and readiness to cope with any fire that may break out in the city, until the system under the new Fire Brigades Act can be brought into operation, has been extended for another month. The arrangement at the end of December was, that the Insurance Brigade should be maintained in its present condition under the control and at the cost of the Government for the month of January, and this will be continued till the end of February, or until the preparations for the new order of things are complete.

The pioneer steamer of the Orient Company's immigrant service, the Abregado, arrived yesterday from Plymouth after a most successful voyage. She brings 414 souls. Owing to several fever having broken out during the voyage, though no cases have occurred for more than three weeks, the port health officer ordered the ship to observe quarantine until the clothes of the immigrants are washed and the ship fumigated. This was done on Tuesday and Wednesday. A full description of the voyage, &c., will be found in our shipping columns.

We regret having to announce that Lady Deas-Thompson, widow of the late Hon. Sir Edward Deas-Thompson, died at her residence, Barham, yesterday. She was second daughter of Governor Sir Richard Bourke, and was 77 years of age.

In another column appears a report of the progress made with the Hunter River district water supply works, and a description of the scheme is intended to carry out. The principal works are at the Walke lagoon, about three miles distant from West Maitland. At this point a storage reservoir capable of containing 172,500,000 gallons of water is being constructed, and will be filled by means of pumping machinery from the Hunter River.

We propose publishing at the beginning of each month a meteorological abstract for the month preceding. The abstract for January will be found in our shipping columns. The barometer was higher than during any previous January, and the temperature nearly one degree above the average. The rainfall is conspicuous as being the least ever recorded for January.

YESTERDAY the weather was most peculiar. In the morning the sky had an unsettled appearance, and the wind was variable, but scarcely anyone could have been prepared for the violent squall which burst over the city soon after midday. The wind was from the south-west, and blew a strong gale, while the rain fell heavily. Unfortunately, the rain took on so suddenly as it began, and an hour afterwards the sun was shining in an unclouded sky. At about 2 o'clock the wind settled in about west, and blew freely, and as from a furnace, for three hours, at the end of which time it shifted suddenly round to the southward again, and gradually lessened until it was blowing with the force of a gale. The harbour for a time was "fetched white," and boating parties had a bad time of it generally, in several cases serious accidents occurring. Twenty members of the New South Wales Naval Volunteer Artillery were taken out in the Wolverene on Saturday for practice. As the corps numbers between 80 and 90 members, this would seem to show a marked falling off in the enthusiasm which was noticeable when the corps was first formed, or else "right good sailors" is a phrase that many of the gentlemen forming it feel they cannot aspire to. However, the drill on Saturday passed off fairly well. Lieutenant Drake, officer instructor, and Mr. Jones, gunner instructor, put the men through their paces. Amongst the visitors were Lieutenant Colonel Raymond and Major Turner, the latter of the Victorian Permanent Staff. Advantage was taken of the opportunity to try some new gear for hoisting her anchor supplied to the Wolverene, and it worked fairly well. The Wolverene, which was under the command of Captain Taylor, returned to her moorings at 7 p.m.

A MEETING called by the Protection and Political League was held in the new Masonic Hall, Castlereagh-street, on Saturday evening. The meeting, which was well attended, was presided over by Mr. P. Richardson. The chief speakers were Mr. Dr. Buchanan, M.L.A., Mr. Abigail, M.L.A., Mr. Ross, Mr. Mason, Mr. Lacombe, Mr. Keary, Mr. Ryan, and Mr. Colburn. Resolutions condemning the financial proposals of the Government and advocating ad valorem duties were unanimously agreed to.

The annual meeting of the Waverley Auxiliary to the Church Society of the Diocese of Sydney was held in the schoolroom, Church-street, on Wednesday evening.

The Rev. Stanley Mitchell presided. The annual report having been read, the Rev. Canon H. S. King, who was present, gave a short account of the manner in which funds were raised for Church of England purposes in 1883, comparing it with the more efficacious mode under which the Church Society of the present day was managed. He strongly urged the need of increased exertions in the present year by the members of the Church of England in order that the society might not be exposed in any of its work by the loss of £1200, which would fall on it this year through the withdrawal of State aid. He begged for united action, that they would—to use a nautical phrase—"Pull, boys, all together!" The resolution was seconded by the Rev. S. S. Forey. He asked for help because the work which the society was seeking to do. The work of the society was, he said, to aid in the redemption of the Kingdom of God in the hearts of every man, woman, and child in the colony; to combat the lawlessness now so prevalent, by attacking it where it was engendered, in the homes of the careless and the bad; to help to keep alive in people's hearts the belief in the divinity of Jesus Christ; to bring to the aid of the State the moral and spiritual power which the State is unable to supply; to bring to the aid of the State the moral and spiritual power which the State is unable to supply; to bring to the aid of the State the moral and spiritual power which the State is unable to supply.

A notice in connection with the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Society of St. Simon and St. James, Church of England, Surry Hills, took place at the church, the Rev. Geo. Middleton, was present, as also a great number of the congregation. The juvenile Temperance Band discoursed several songs, and during the afternoon various kinds of games were played, and shortly after 5 p.m. the picnicers were conveyed for a trip round the harbour, and arrived at the Circular Quay about 6.30, after having spent a very enjoyable afternoon.

The annual meeting of the Woolahra Band of Hope Penny Savings Bank was held on Thursday evening, 31st January, in the Ocean-street Congregational Church. The Rev. Canon H. S. King presided. The secretary's report, on being read, showed that at the beginning of last year there were 127 members, with deposits amounting to £163 18s. 4d.; and, although the actual membership had slightly decreased throughout the year, the amount of deposits at the end of the year stood at £120 8s. 2d. The report of the secretary was unanimously adopted; and the officers elected for the following year were as follows:—Directors, Messrs. J. Miller, C. Blumer, and S. V. Burnett; secretary, Mr. G. H. Sands; treasurer, Mr. J. M. Sands; auditors, Messrs. J. Borton and T. M. Fancourt; the treasurer, who are non-elective, being Mrs. E. H. Daniels, F. J. Palmer, and J. H. Palmer. A large number of thanks had been passed the meeting terminated.

ON account of a misunderstanding between the firm belonging to the Port Jackson Company's steamers and the directors of the company, the boats running to and from Manly were stopped for a short time on Saturday morning. It appears that the men refused to go on duty in consequence of the rates of wages offered by the company. The men had been receiving the rate of the port, viz., £2 per week, but were not found in provisions. This they considered unfair, and asked that they should either be supplied with provisions or be allowed £11 per month. A meeting of the directors of the company was at once convened, and the matter was referred to the directors of the company. The directors of the company were at once convened, and the matter was referred to the directors of the company. The directors of the company were at once convened, and the matter was referred to the directors of the company.

THE DESTRUCTIVE HURRICANE AT BOWEN AND AT RAVENSWOOD. (BY TELEGRAPH.) (FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BRISBANE, SUNDAY. A telegram received from Bowen to-night states:—"The storm began on Wednesday morning, when houses as well as trees began to fall. The Princess of Wales, a brick building which was situated in the town, was blown down. The roof of the new Supreme Court was blown off. The pilot shed was blown down, and the pilot boats and the cutter were lost. At Poole Island the most freezing works were destroyed. A steam launch and the points also were all gone to the bottom. The railway in the works was very destructive. The general loss amounts to between £2000 and £10,000. The steamer Fiala broke her cable, and drifted on to the beach, and it is doubtful whether she will get off at next spring tides. Fortunately no lives were lost. Every house in the town is more or less damaged. Many families who are residents here took refuge in the English church and public buildings. The general loss is very great. There is, it is supposed, a wreck at Gloucester Island, but there are no boats here to go out to make any search or render any help. It is not known where the steamer Pearl is, but it is feared that she too is lost. The weather was calm, and fortunately the rain which preceded the storm did not do much harm. It is stated that the Duke of Buckingham (a) left Townsville 12 hours earlier than he would have done. All the boats in the harbour have disappeared. The steamer passed a great quantity of wreckage after leaving Bowen. The storm extended with destructive effect over a wide area. At Ravenswood there was a severe hail storm, with hail stones of the size of a hen's egg, which caused great destruction. The Roman Catholic chapel was levelled to the ground, and the priest's house was partially blown away. The Anglican parsonage was also unroofed, and many private dwellings shared the same fate, some being entirely blown down. Reports from the outlying places describe the storm as very destructive. At the creek within a considerable radius were rapidly flooded. The storm had an extensive front. At Clare the old telegraph station was blown down, the wind striking all the wires of the new building also. The Burdick bridge has been much endangered, and heavy damages have been done to the railway. The Government has forwarded a number of tents, a boat, and other articles. The police magistrate has received instructions to adopt every means in his power towards alleviating the public distress. It is said that about 100 persons in Bowen have been left entirely destitute.

HEAVY FLOODS IN NORTHERN QUEENSLAND. (BY TELEGRAPH.) (FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BRISBANE, SUNDAY. A heavy flood occurred at Mackay on Friday. The wharfs were entirely submerged, and the streets were flooded with three feet of water in some of the houses. The most serious damage was done to the houses of the poor, who were swept away. No loss of life is reported, but many were very narrow escapes. The flood has now subsided. A severe flood is reported at Surat. Cobb's coach from Cammerula, while attempting to cross the river last night, was capsized, and the horses were drowned. The driver saved his life by clinging to a tree, from which position he was subsequently rescued with difficulty. There were no passengers. The mail was recovered this morning. The river rose eight feet in three hours. The rain has now cleared off. At Brisbane yesterday and to-day the weather was fine and hot.

At Rockhampton the rain still continues to fall. During the last 24 hours the registered rainfall was 9.37 inches. A coach with four horses was driven away two miles from town, on the Yepoon-road, last night. Two of the horses were drowned, and the vehicle was considerably damaged. Two occupants were saved, the other climbed a tree, where he was rescued at daylight.

SEVERE DROUGHT IN QUEENSLAND. (BY TELEGRAPH.) (FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BRISBANE, SUNDAY. Although the late heavy rain extended over a wide area, some fell in some places, where the drought is still so severely felt. Depreciable accounts have come to hand from Laidlaw respecting the state of the country. The stock are dying fast. All the waterholes are full of dead and dying cattle. If rain does not come shortly the Lower Darling stations will be decimated. The Lower Barcoo-road is now entirely without grass for 80 miles. The Thompson-road is almost as bad. It is reported that Salters Creek station has lost 80,000 sheep, and Marlow 3000 cattle. Over 300 dead sheep were counted in one hole.

condition being well within the strength of an ordinary salt-water bottle. The substance can be made in any quantity and very cheaply, and seems peculiarly well adapted for arresting at any rate the early progress of a fire by bottles, or even large metal drums, of the liquid being thrown into the room or building, where it would very rapidly evaporate and exclude the atmosphere, and at the same time produce a very considerable reduction of temperature.

A hearty but welcome innovation (says the P. M. Gazette of December 21) is made this morning by the Standard. Hitherto it has been the almost invariable rule of all newspapers to keep up the absurd fiction that the insignificance of a special correspondent should be secretly observed. While all the rest of the world was talking of Mr. Russell, Mr. Forbes, or Mr. Macdonald, the employees of these gentlemen never mentioned them except as "our special correspondent." The Standard this morning sets a good example by discarding this superstition. It speaks in its leading columns of its special correspondent at Soukima simply as Mr. Cameron; and we hope the precedent will be followed. It is much better for all concerned that the insignificance of the journalistic representatives of England abroad should be definitely discarded.

The Church of England Record says:—"We do not like dogging; but we like less the evils which it is designed to correct. It is an extreme measure, devised to meet a state of things which is bordering upon the intolerable. And we have great hopes that what has been attempted will succeed in doing, viz., putting down the meanness and brutality of 'larricism.'"

A public meeting, called by the Mayor of Sydney in response to a numerous signed requisition, for the purpose of protesting against the proposed extension of the Government, was held at the Town Hall this evening. It will be presided over by the Mayor, and will be addressed by a number of well-known citizens.

The following is the report of the Prince Alfred Hospital for the week ending 31st January:—Number of in-patients at last report, 74 males, 58 females; total, 132; since admitted, 15 males, 11 females; total, 26; discharged, 12 males, 10 females; total, 22; died, 1 male, 2 females; total, 3; remaining in hospital on 31st January, 1884, 76 males, 61 females; total, 137.

The following is a return of tin ore received at Newcastle for the week ending 26th January, 1884:—From Australia, 6 tons 2 cwt. 26 lb.; from Uralia, 11 tons 3 cwt. 2 lb.; from West Tanworth, 22 tons 13 cwt. 3 lb.; total, 47 tons 6 cwt.

THE SOUDAN REBELLION.

(BUTLER'S TELEGRAM.)

CAIRO, FEB. 2. Major-General Gordon, the newly-appointed Governor of the Sudan, has arrived at Korosko, on the Nile, and has entered the desert westward of that place.

Advices from Baker Pasha state that he recently made a reconnaissance from the seaboard in the direction of Tokor. He encountered a considerable body of hostile natives. The enemy, however, took flight on the approach of the advancing force, and retreated in a southerly direction. They were pursued by Baker's cavalry, who killed some hundreds of them.
